Further, the report showed that 19% of those given blood died from their injuries, that's close to 25% of people given blood actually died. Again, nothing to laugh about. The question remains unanswered: How can a medical practice that kills, be said to save lives? I don't see anything amusing in this question. Why don't you find out from the IBTS how many of those 1000 people actually died? Or do you think they all lived? According to the shot report figures we would expect far more than 50 to die. Again, nothing to laugh about.
